1. Introduction

Emergency contraception via intrauterine device

Emergency contraception can prevent pregnancy after unprotected sex, and is available either as an emergency contraceptive pill (containing either ulipristal acetate or levonorgestrel), or an emergency intrauterine devices (IUDs).

The emergency IUD is by far the most effective form of emergency contraception, and has the huge advantage of also providing excellent ongoing contraception for up to 10 years. Whilst emergency contraceptive pills are somewhat effective, they need to be taken soon after unprotected sex for the best chance of effectiveness. In the case of levonorgestrel, it is not licensed for patients who have unprotected sex more than 72 hours earlier in the same menstrual cycle. Other reasons that may make the contraceptive pill unsuitable include impaired efficacy in patients with malabsorption syndromes or in patients who take concomitant medicines that reduce efficacy (e.g. CYP3A4 enzyme inducers, such as carbamazepine, rifampicin or St. Johns Wort).

There is usually time to arrange an emergency IUD as it can be fitted up to five days after unprotected sex or up to five days after earliest ovulation, whichever is the latest. An emergency IUD should always be discussed, particularly where there have been multiple episodes of unprotected sex, where the patient really does not wish to get pregnant, and if there are any reasons oral methods may be less effective which include a raised BMI. If the patient opts for an emergency IUD, also supply oral emergency contraception (if suitable) to take straight away, in case they later change their mind, or an IUD cannot be fitted.

Long-acting reversible contraception

Long-acting reversible contraception (LARC) includes contraceptive implants, IUDs, intrauterine systems and contraceptive injections. They are highly effective at preventing pregnancy, and their effects can last for several years depending on the chosen product. Because of this, pregnancy prevention programmes (such as the programme recommended for use of valproate in women of childbearing age) recommend the use of LARC.

2. Quick reference guide

The quick reference guide contains information on clinics and GP practices who are commissioned to offer emergency IUD and/or LARC.

Table 1 contains information for referrals into contraceptive services for patients who require an emergency IUD or LARC. This referral process covers all patients who are registered to a GP practice within the NCL CCG region.

Table 2 contains information on GP practices within NCL who are commissioned to administer LARC only (GPs do not offer emergency IUDs).

For patients who reside outside of NCL, please direct the patient to their GP practice for more information.

Borough	Service details	Clinic	Address	Further advice	Referral information
Barnet Camden Haringey Islington	Service operated by CNWL https://www.sexualhealth.cnwl.nhs.uk/ 020 3317 5252	Mortimer Market Centre	Capper Street, Tottenham Court Road, WC1E 6JB	For further advice, contact (healthcare professionals only): 0203 317 5454	For emergency IUD patients can walk in at any of the sites listed. See the CNWL website for opening hours (see 'London contraception and STI care' for Barnet, Camden and Islington based patients, or 'Haringey Young Peoples Services and LARC (coils and implants) for all women' for Haringey based patients). Patients can also call the central booking office on 020 3317 5252 to arrange an appointment. If a healthcare professional is referring for LARC (e.g. for a pregnancy prevention programme), send an email referral to cnw-tr.sexualhealthreferrals.cnwl@nhs.net . Ensure the email includes the reason for referral, patients name, address, date of birth, contact number and relevant medical history (including current medications, past medical history and allergies). If the patient is unsure which LARC therapy to use, they will first be given a telephone consultation to discuss.

Enfield	Sexual health services led by Enfield Clinics Health Organisation (ECHO) and North Middlesex University Hospital (NMUH) https://www.echoclinics.nhs.uk/contraception/ 020 8887 4510	Enfield Integrated Sexual Health Service	Silverpoint Medical Centre, 88-90 Fore Street, Edmonton, N18 2SL	If necessary, the referrer can call the clinic booking line on 020 8887 4510 and ask for a senior clinician (or to request a call back).	Pharmacies commissioned to provide EHC services in Enfield can refer onwards to ECHO for IUD administration via PharmOutcomes web platform, from which referral emails are generated. For non-commissioned pharmacies, send an email referral to northmid.enfieldclinics@nhs.net (and copy in the consultant jenine.bignall1@nhs.net). For urgent cases, please put "URGENT" in the subject title, and provide the name, address, date of birth, contact number and relevant medical history (including current medications, past medical history and allergies). The service will contact the patient initially to triage; for LARC, they will assess which they would like and that they are appropriate prior to inviting for the procedure.
