Support for those who cannot travel independently, for medical reasons

If your medical condition affects your ability to travel independently (including with the help of friends, relatives or carers) the NHS offers transport services that you may be able to use.

Access to patient transport is based on medical need and the Department of Health and Social Care's (DHSC) eligibility guidance is followed.

The DHSC eligibility criteria restrict transport to patients whose clinical condition means that travelling by any other means would be detrimental to their recovery or existing condition, such as (but not limited) to:

- patients who need to be transported on a stretcher
- some wheelchair patients
- some patients receiving oxygen
- patients who require paramedic services
- patients who need the support of patient transport staff during the journey

The DHSC sets the criteria for access to this service nationally.

Patient transport is not offered to patients who cannot use public or private transport for financial reasons, however other help may be available for this (see page 6).

How do I know if I can use the patient transport service?

The patient transport assessment centre will guide you through the process of booking transport. They will ask a number of questions to see whether you meet the national criteria.

The confidential assessment lasts approximately seven minutes.

Before you call, please make sure you have the following information available:

- NHS number
- date of appointment
- time of appointment
- location of appointment (including clinic name/number)

Patient transport during the Covid 19

Pandemic

During the Covid-19 pandemic, standard patient transport arrangements have been superseded by new national guidance.

The aim of the NHS in North Central London is to ensure safe and fast discharge from hospital, and provide patient transport to and from ongoing care appointments. We have adopted the nationally agreed priority groups of patients for commissioned patient transport services.

Volunteers may be suitable for some transportation tasks. For these tasks please use the GoodSAM app www.goodsamapp.org/NHSreferral or for self-referral call 0808 196 3646.
